Battlefield of Manassas.

On August 12th, by arrangement of friends in Prince William and Fairfer counties, we were at Sudley church, near the line between the above counties. On that day, in the morning, a very abla sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Rogers, P. E. of the Methodist church of the Alexandria district, and in the afternoon a missionary meeting was held, on which occasion your correspondent was the speaker. This church is near the place where the federal forces were Evans, on Sunday morning, July 21, 1861, the day of the memorable first battle of Manassas. Long had it been our wish to visit this historic field, and with our own eye upon the ground over which twice rolled the surge of battle. This long cherished desire was at last gratified through the kindness of H. J. Ayers, esq., living a short di inace from this church, and whose hospitality we enjoyed while in Fairfax county.

On Monday morning, after having treated us to a most exhibarating ride on horseback over a part of his beautiful farm, skirted on the esst and the south by the new classic Bull Run, he kindly inquired if we would like to visit the Henry House, three miles distant, and the main point of interest of the two bloody fights of Manassas.

We were quite ready to saize the opportunity afforded, and soon our horses, heads were Manassa-word.

When we reached our objective point Prof. H. F. Henry ar, an intelligent and courteous Virginia gentleman of the old echool, took us under his charge and led us to a point east of his house where the southern troops mainly were stationed.

This elevation, we were told, was the key to both the battles of Manasses

The battle raged around this house and some soldiers were found killed in the hall. The inmates of the house were Mrs. Henry, a son and daughter and servant: The Proteaching.
